REHAU Offers Enhanced Training Experience with 2010 Skill Builders Radiant Heating and Sustainable Building Seminars

LEESBURG, Va., January 25, 2010 – REHAU announces the 2010 schedule of Skill Builders training classes offered throughout the U.S. and Canada by REHAU Academy. The schedule incorporates traditional three-day comprehensive Skill Builders Complete training courses, as well as nine Skill Builders Focus Sessions tailored to the specific needs of experienced radiant contractors and heating professionals. The latter includes half- and one-day Radiant Installers Focus Sessions, a half-day Radiant Designers Focus Session, and one- and two-day Hydronic Designers Focus Sessions. Focus Sessions will be scheduled throughout the year, and specific dates can be found by visiting the REHAU Academy web site at www.na.rehau.com/academy.

Additional Skill Builders seminars will provide educational sessions on the employment of alternative energy technologies and sustainable building techniques in residential and commercial projects. These include a half-day Sustainable Building Technology seminar and half-day RAUGEO™ ground loop heat exchange system seminar, both of which will be scheduled throughout 2010 in a variety of U.S. and Canadian locations.

“REHAU and REHAU Academy are committed to providing professional training opportunities that elevate technical know-how and increase business for our attendees,” said Lance MacNevin, unit manager of REHAU Academy. “Recognizing the rising demand for expertise in PEX-based system installation, as well as an understanding of and ability to integrate sustainable building technologies, we have expanded our 2010 Skill Builders training classes to provide even more hands-on experience in these areas.”
